Chapter 1: The 1950 Shoe Game

The 1950 Shoe Game was one of the most memorable games in college football history. It was played between Ohio State and Michigan on November 25, 1950, at Ohio Stadium. The game was tied 7-7 at halftime, but Ohio State scored two touchdowns in the second half to win 20-7.

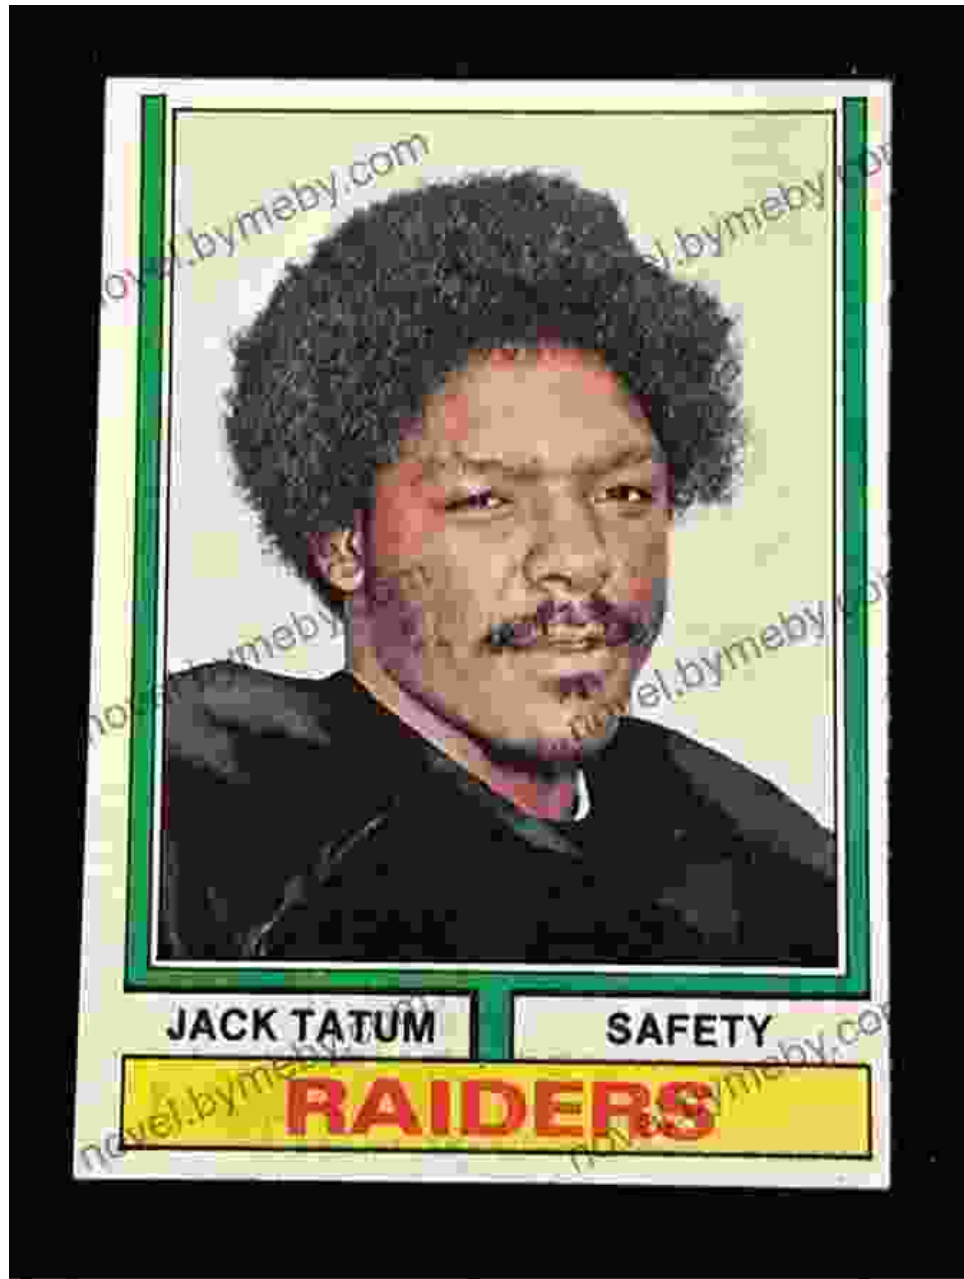

The game is best known for the play that occurred in the fourth quarter. With Michigan driving down the field, Ohio State's Vic Janowicz intercepted a pass and returned it 65 yards for a touchdown. This play sealed the victory for Ohio State and gave them their first national championship in 23 years.

Chapter 2: The 1974 Michigan Game

The 1974 Michigan Game was another classic matchup between the Buckeyes and the Wolverines. It was played on November 23, 1974, at Michigan Stadium. Ohio State won the game 12-10, thanks to a late field goal by Tom Klaban.

The game was a defensive struggle, with both teams holding their opponents to under 100 yards of offense. Ohio State's defense was led by Jack Tatum, who intercepted two passes and returned one for a touchdown.

Chapter 3: The 1997 Rose Bowl

The 1997 Rose Bowl was a rematch of the 1996 national championship game between Ohio State and Arizona State. Ohio State won the game 20-17, thanks to a last-second field goal by Josh Willingham.

The game was a back-and-forth affair, with both teams holding the lead at different points. Ohio State took the lead for good with just over two minutes remaining in the game, when Willingham kicked a 36-yard field goal.

Chapter 4: The 2002 National Championship

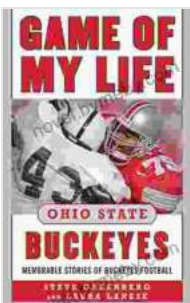

The 2002 National Championship was Ohio State's first national championship in 34 years. The Buckeyes defeated the Miami Hurricanes 31-24 in double overtime.

The game was a thriller, with both teams trading touchdowns throughout the game. Ohio State took the lead for good in the second overtime, when Maurice Clarett scored on a 5-yard run.
