

Inducing Labour: Making Informed Decisions

Inducing labour is the process of starting labour artificially. It is usually done when the doctor feels that it is necessary to deliver the baby before the natural onset of labour. There are a number of reasons why a doctor might recommend inducing labour, including:

- The baby is overdue.
- The mother has a medical condition that makes it necessary to deliver the baby early.
- The mother's water has broken and labour has not started naturally.
- The baby is in distress.

Inducing labour can be done in a number of ways, including:
