“Judah Maccabee was born in the year 167 BCE. He was the third son of Mattathias, a Jewish priest. Judah grew up in a time of great turmoil. The Seleucid Empire, which ruled Judea, was oppressing the Jewish people. The Seleucids had outlawed the practice of Judaism and had desecrated the Temple in Jerusalem.

In 167 BCE, Mattathias and his sons revolted against the Seleucids. They were joined by a group of other Jewish rebels, and together they formed the Maccabees. The Maccabees fought bravely against the Seleucids, and they won a number of important victories. In 164 BCE, Judah Maccabee became the leader of the Maccabees.

Under Judah's leadership, the Maccabees continued to fight against the Seleucids. They won a number of important victories, and in 164 BCE, they recaptured the Temple in Jerusalem. The Maccabees then rededicated the Temple and established the Hanukkah festival.
