Ryszard Kapuscinski's Travels With Herodotus is a classic work of travel writing that explores the connections between the ancient world and the modern day. Through his travels to Egypt, Greece, Turkey, and Iran, Kapuscinski brings the history and culture of these regions to life, offering a unique perspective on the human condition.

Kapuscinski's journey begins in Egypt, where he visits the pyramids of Giza and the ruins of Thebes. He is struck by the grandeur and mystery of these ancient monuments, and he begins to see the connections between the past and the present.

In Greece, Kapuscinski visits the Acropolis in Athens and the ruins of Delphi. He learns about the history of democracy and philosophy, and he sees how these ideas have shaped the world we live in today.

In Turkey, Kapuscinski travels to Istanbul, the former capital of the Ottoman Empire. He visits the Hagia Sophia and the Topkapi Palace, and he learns about the rich history and culture of this crossroads of civilizations.

In Iran, Kapuscinski visits the ruins of Persepolis and the city of Isfahan. He learns about the history of the Persian Empire and the Islamic Revolution, and he sees how these events have shaped the country's present-day politics and culture.

Throughout his travels, Kapuscinski meets a wide range of people, from archaeologists and historians to farmers and shepherds. He learns about their lives and their perspectives on the world, and he comes to understand the common threads that connect all of humanity.

Travels With Herodotus is a beautifully written and thought-provoking book that offers a unique perspective on the human condition. Kapuscinski's insights into history, culture, and the human experience are both timely and timeless, and his book is sure to resonate with readers for generations to come.
